Dinner is Danced

About Project Plait

Project Plait is an initiative to combine Food & Dance to create an integrated theatrical and gastronomic experience that's the first of its kind in Singapore.

Dancer & choreographer Naomi Tan collaborates with Chef Nixon Low to create a fresh experience that debunks the tired dinner-and-a-show package by bringing quality food and contemporary dance together in the same space. Both the dance and food complement each other and tell a story together.

Abolishing the barrier of the stage, the dance happens close to and among diners. Guests are guided through the experience and perhaps even play active roles in experiencing the food and dance.

Since 2015, Project Plait has created and performed several different works. In 2017 & 2018, Project Plait's events were among the featured events of the annual Singapore Food Festival organised by Singapore Tourism Board. 2017 also saw us opening our events for group and corporate bookings.

The Dining Experience

What to Expect

Tables and chairs are typically arranged in a large square, with guests seated around a “performance area” where the dance works would be performed.

Diners could expect a fine dining style, multi-course surprise menu to be served, alternating with short dance works performed throughout the evening. The entire group of diners would progress through the evening’s programme together- after everyone is seated, the first dance will begin, and after that, the first course of the menu would be served. After everyone has finished and plates have been cleared, the second dance would commence, and so on.

Project Plait’s food-&-dance events typically last between 2 to 2.5 hours.

The shows

Cardinal Sins

The seven deadly sins are re-imagined as Food & Dance.

A visually-arresting, thematic and sophisticated performance sure to indulge your guests.

The shows

The Daily Grind

Follow the day of a typical office worker through Food & Dance.

Let the dance introduce a little bit of wonder and humour into our daily urban routines, while the inventive menu takes you through the different meals of the day.

Not everything is as it seems, however, and our specially curated menu may look like one thing, but taste like another!

The shows

Inheritance

Inspired by our local traditions, Inheritance imagines a future dystopian Singapore in which our unique identity has been lost.

Join us as we journey back to the present and reclaim our lost traditions.
